

Captive Minions

The following sentence is an example of how far the deceiver has managed to shackle the bible. This is part of an email sent on 6 September 2005 11.05 am with an immediate suspension of account so there was not even time to say goodbye:

While I am prepared to reinstate your account if you can tell me honestly you will stay within the boundaries we have discussed and not post about the connection between God/the bible and world events, anything that may be considered prophetic, the battle between God & Satan etc,

There are a lot of issues surrounding this correspondence, most of which has been tabled in earlier papers. However, what is now in fundamental dispute is the biblical validity of this determination. The issue is what is not being allowed to be publicly discussed:

- connection between God/the bible and world events;
- anything that may be considered prophetic;
- the battle between God & Satan;
- etc...

Now I'm sorry if I am too naive, but I thought some of the core purposes of the bible were to:

- demonstrate beyond reasonable doubt the existence of God and His Word
- confirm the bible as God's medium to talk to His people;
- confirm God's Word through apologetics, linking things of the bible to world events;
- and by extrapolation demonstrating the relevance of the bible to all peoples of all the nations today (and not just to Adam and Eve, Noah, Moses, the Jews, or people 2000 years ago);
- demonstrate God's absolute divine authority, with confirmation of His messengers signs and prophecies being a favored strategy;
- guide individuals how to live a godly life, seek out and accept God's grace, and comfort individuals that God has compassion and wants people to call out to Him for redemption and protection from Satan;
- witness God's promises and covenants to humanity and that there will come a day when all His people will be back in His grace;
- verify that God has a plan to reconcile humanity's consciousness back to God, not least of which is that Jesus is God's atoning sacrifice and thus Lord of Lords for all of humanity for all time.

So when I am told to not address such matters, I am effectively being told to avoid the core ministry of the bible (both Old and New Testament). Who would want to suppress this kind of teaching? God? Jesus? Spirit? I don't think so.

Now the same people who would gag souls from this kind of ministry can not expel us because we are obviously committed to Jesus. To reach this level of blatant censorship we have to have already passed the following trials:

- not being brought off into Babylonian delusions of personal power and glory;
- continuing to persist despite character assassination, shunning and coercion;
- continuing to move forward in faith, again and again, overcoming each obstacle and set back;
- embracing humility because to pretend we are perfect is to lure us into a corner where pride and fear can be used to extort, entice or intimidate us into perverting God's Word and knowingly being agents for the deceiver;

- embracing patience, compassion and love and continued the fight against the deceiver's agents for the sake of our brothers and sisters across the eons that have suffered or died for the glory of the Father.

So what do the deceiver's agents try to do with such souls (especially if they are female)? Deny them the earthly authority to speak as God's witnesses.

However, we are consoled that there is no hindrance to the ministry of works. This plays straight into the hands of the deceiver. One of the deceiver's penultimate fantasies is to have millions if not billions of God's people infused with Holy Spirit but bound to silence into doing works for the deceiver's perverted form of the church. The deceiver gloats to God that these minions are his because they are doing works in a church holding his name, but God sees beyond the deceiver's shallow gloating. God sees those that do works for the glory of the True God and that those souls do these works silently with the patient endurance of the saints as God's witnesses of the absolute corruption of the deceiver and as beacons of hope for those less fortunate souls around them.

We might be bound into silence and ministry of works alone, but our souls are not bound and our hearts and minds pray night and day for God's final judgment and redemption of all His captured peoples.

We take comfort in the fleeting glimpses by Spirit that grant us the wisdom and knowledge to persevere for the greater good and ultimate glory of our heavenly Father. We take refuge in Christ's sanctuary and the forecourts of Zion.

We await the sounding of the trumpets in Zion and Jesus' call to arms to pursue and remove every thread of the deceiver's lies, snares, pits, accusations and intimidations from humanity's consciousness. We will follow with arrows of God's truth, sending flares into every dark corner and orifice of this planet. God's flaming torches will reach the highest and the deepest crevices. No amount of mazes, rocks, locks, doors or palaces will protect those who seek to hide from God's glory.

One form of praise and worship is heralding God's penultimate triumph. The actual date and time of God's victory remains known only to the Father Himself, but all of His chosen peoples can be rest assured that ultimate and complete victory will be His and His alone. In the meantime we can take comfort that there is still time for people to repent, there is still time to seek the baptism by water and Spirit. There is still time to forsake the deceiver's snares of fear and pride and illusions of power and riches.

Thus we herald: God has a plan and will triumph. All of God's peoples will arise to see Jesus sit on the throne as King of King, Lord of Lord, and Buddha of Buddha's.
