

Maximising Redemption: Captive Minions

Note: this section was short because the content was in attachments.

Captive Minions

One of the deceiver's favorite fantasy is to have millions of souls imbued with the grace of God/Spirit but bound to "do the right thing" by priestly castes, even if corrupt or infected by the deceiver. There are some papers attached including "Captive Minions" and "Cloning and Flockhart Review Input" which articulate some of my concerns and issues in regards to these matters. Again, these might not be the best papers written, but my purpose is not to write the definitive texts but to ensure that core issues are tabled for possible inclusion on the global agenda.

The deceiver constantly looks for castes of souls who are considered outside of God's grace and therefore fair game for his abuses. If humanity unites to protect each other, then the deceiver will try and create new castes. For example, embryos raised in artificial wombs (see movie "Bladerunner" for one worse case scenario), or chimeras with limited intelligence (to create the legal precedent) who would probably become endowed with more and more self-awareness and intelligence over succeeding generations (leading to the "ghost in the machine" as described in the movie "I Robot").

We might lose the initial battles on cloning and there might be legal sophistries and precedents created at the beginning. But the war must continue, and we should be prepared to think "outside the square" for example, use of public scrutiny and consumer boycotts (e.g. the effort to stop nuclear bombing of Moruroa Atoll).